

MASTER ON LABOUR LEGAL ADVICE

The Master's Program in Labour Legal Advice aims to offer complete training to those who plan to develop their professional activity and to initiate research in the area of labour legal advice, as a social graduate or legal adviser in the field of labour relations and Social Security, either as an independent professional or providing services in the labour legal departments, mainly advising companies and workers.

More specifically, through the development of the master's degree the student will acquire the following competences: to get to know in a specialized way the legal regime of self-employment; the different contractual modalities of employment; the working time regulation; the legal credit and debit positions of the employer and employees; the legal regime of mobility, modification of working conditions and suspension of work activity; the various forms of termination of the contract; the employer and worker liability regime; the Spanish collective bargaining system; Company Law and the Legal Regime of Data Protection; taxation in labour relations; to know in depth the structure and composition of the Social Security System; the legal relationship of affiliation; the legal regime of wages and their contribution to Social Security system; the procedure for collecting quotas and other Social Security resources; the actions of the Labour and Social Security Administration and the regime of infractions and sanctions in the social order and knowing how to apply the administrative and judicial review procedures; the different types of collective conflicts and the jurisdictional scope for their solution and the extrajudicial conflict resolution procedures; and, finally, to get to know in a specialized way the legal relationship of Social Security and other forms of public social protection